Bi-lingual parish celebrates the Word of God

FORT LEE—Over the past 10 years, Father Stephen A. Carey, pastor of Madonna Parish has witnessed the growth of the Korean community in his church. "If you just walk through Fort Lee, you will see the Korean influence around you," he explained.

When he was appointed pastor in 2005, he saw a need to reach out to the Korean faithful. "Since I came to the parish, we have registered over 600 Korean families."

Fr. Carey helped establish a ministry to better serve his community. He felt it was important to "be present" for his Korean parishioners. He even visited South Korea in 2007.

In October of last year, Parochial Vicar Paul Lee approached Fr. Carey about a spiritual exercise in which Korean parishioners transcribed books of the Bible by hand.

"I thought it was a great catechetical and evangelical practice," Fr. Carey said. "For Catholics, it was a great way to internalize the Word of God."

The project flourished and each participant transcribed an individual book of the Bible, working for almost eight months. On May 31, a special Mass was held at the Cathedral Basilica of the Sacred Heart in Newark with 1,200 parishioners from Madonna Parish in attendance.

Entitled, "Celebrating the Word of God," the Mass was celebrated in English with some readings in Korean, and included several songs performed by the Korean adult and children's choirs.

A total of 61 books were transcribed and dedicated at the Mass by Archbishop Bernard A. Hebda. Following the Prayer of the Faithful, Archbishop Hebda blessed the transcriptions, which will be housed at Madonna Parish and available for use by the parishioners.

Before the final blessing Fr. Carey crowned the patronal statue of the Blessed Mother in traditional Korean dress.

Archbishop Hebda appointed Apostolic Administrator of Saint Paul-Minneapolis Archdiocese

At the request of the Holy See, Archbishop Bernard A. Hebda has agreed to take on temporary oversight of the Archdiocese of Saint Paul and Minneapolis pending the appointment of a new archbishop there.

The announcement came from the Vatican June 15 that Archbishop Hebda, who has been serving as coadjutor in the Archdiocese of Newark since September 2013, accepted the additional assignment as Apostolic Administrator of the Midwest archdioceses following the resignation of Archbishop John Nienstedt, 68.

In a letter to the Saint Paul-Minneapolis clergy, religious and faithful Archbishop Hebda said he was humbled by Pope Francis' decision to appoint him to help shepherd the archdiocese of 2.6 million Catholics with Auxiliary Bishop Andrew Cozzens and other archdiocesan leadership.

"I pray that I will be able to be of some service to you, the priests and faithful of the archdiocese, as you prepare for the appointment of a new archbishop," Archbishop Hebda said. The Pittsburgh native added that he had fond memories of his four years as bishop in the neighboring Diocese of Gaylord, "where I first came to know the vibrancy of the faith shared by Catholics of the upper Midwest."

Newark Archbishop John J. Myers, 73, whom Archbishop Hebda, 55, is to ultimately succeed, said both were informed of the Holy Father's decision on Saturday by Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano, U.S. apostolic nuncio.

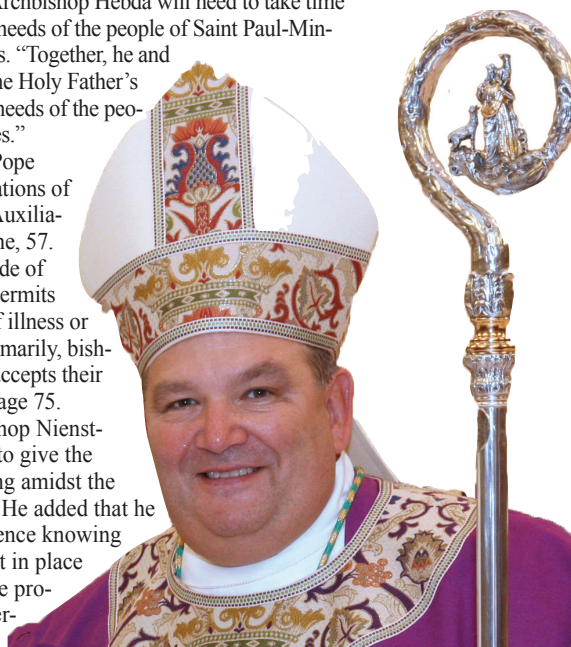

Extending his best wishes to Archbishop Hebda, Archbishop Myers reminded the faithful of Newark that details of the dual position required time to work out.

"I am sure you all will understand that we are still in the early stages of this moment, and Archbishop Hebda will need to take time to become familiar with the needs of the people of Saint Paul-Minneapolis," Archbishop Myers. "Together, he and I will ensure that we fulfill the Holy Father's wishes to address the many needs of the people of both great archdioceses."

The moves come after Pope Francis accepted the resignations of Archbishop Nienstedt and Auxiliary Bishop Lee Anthony Piche, 57. They resigned under the Code of Canon Law provision that permits bishops to resign because of illness or another grave reason. Customarily, bishops serve until the Vatican accepts their mandatory offer to retire at age 75.

In a statement, Archbishop Nienstedt said he was resigning "to give the archdiocese a new beginning amidst the many challenges we face." He added that he leaves "with a clear conscience knowing that my team and I have put in place solid protocols to ensure the protection of minors and vulnerable adults."

Seton Hall welcomes 1,150 new alumni at commencement

“The world is fragile. Let’s make it better; let’s make it ours,” said valedictorian Isabella Duarte, a Cancun, Mexico native who graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor’s degree in physics and a minor in applied scientific mathematics from the College of Arts and Sciences. She addressed approximately 1,150 undergraduates, at Seton Hall University’s 158th Baccalaureate commencement on May 18 at the Prudential Center, Newark.

“Seton Hall has implanted the seeds of compassion and duty in our hearts; it is up to us to make them grow,” she said. “I encourage you to dream, to imagine an extraordinary world full of hope and solidarity, a world of peace. Be the politicians that are concerned for their country and not themselves; the scientists that find the cures to diseases and the citizens that make a difference in their community.”

University President A. Gabriel Esteban challenged alumni to transform the world with love. “Learn to value the people around you more than the things that surround you. Stay close to Seton Hall always and those who will follow you. I ask that you give up yourselves to this community that has nurtured and educated you. I ask that you make commitments as servant leaders to go forth and live your lives in the service of others. May the Lord continue to bless and guide you on your next journey,” Esteban said.

Seton Hall graduated approximately 2,261 undergraduate and graduate students, and awarded 125 academic medals and awards. Separate ceremonies were held for Seton Hall University’s estimated 1,111 graduate students.

Caldwell University celebrates graduates

Caldwell University celebrated its 73rd annual commencement May 17 in the George R. Newman Center on campus. For the first time in the university's history, Caldwell held two ceremonies, one for graduate students and another for undergraduates due to the institution's growth.

Laura Schreiber delivered the student address at the graduate commencement ceremony. Schreiber, who received her master's degree in counseling with mental health/art therapy concentration, referenced an article in Time magazine a 2013 article in which writer Joel Stein described millennials as lazy, entitled and narcissistic.

"Thankfully, I know that this assessment of our generation is not true in its entirety," she said. She dared her fellow graduates to "boldly and practically" prove Stein wrong.

Commencement was held in the George R. Newman Center on campus.

Kathleen Flynn delivered the student address at the undergraduate commencement.

Flynn, who received a bachelor's degree in communication arts and political science, compared the students' journey to the growth of a flower.

"Four years ago, when we chose Caldwell University, we planted a proverbial seed on this campus... Today is the celebration of our blossoming."

An honorary degree was presented to philanthropist Michael Kambourakis who was instrumental in the founding of two nonprofits, the SEARCH Day program that assists those on the autism spectrum, and the Dominican Republic Relief Organization that aids thousands of displaced Haitians who moved to the neighboring island nation after the 2010 earthquake.

Caldwell University awarded approximately 380 undergraduate, graduate and doctoral degrees. "It is a day of great joy and pride for the faculty, staff and administration of Caldwell as we send forth our 73rd class of graduates to make a positive impact upon the world," President Nancy H. Blattner said.

Secretary Hendricks offers advice to College of Saint Elizabeth graduates

The College of Saint Elizabeth celebrated its 113th commencement May 16 under the big tent on the lawn of the Morris Township campus. Rochelle R. Hendricks, secretary of Higher Education for New Jersey, was keynote speaker and received an honorary doctorate from the college.

The college conferred 251 undergraduate degrees, 161 degrees in the graduate programs, and two doctoral degrees.

"There are many special people in the audience today – our graduates," President Helen J. Streubert said. "They have done incredible things while pursuing their degrees –

Saint Peter's celebrates 124th Commencement

On May 18, thousands filled the amphitheater at the PNC Bank Arts Center in Holmdel for the 124th commencement of Saint Peter's University.

The Jersey City institution awarded 21 doctoral degrees, 255 master's degrees, 477 bachelor's degrees, and 16 associate's degrees. The Class of 2015 also included the first students to graduate from the master's programs in public administration and strategic communication.

Prajwol Gautam and Prajwal Niraula were co-vaedictorians for the Class of 2015. Each spoke of the gratitude they felt for their professors and friends as well as members of their families. "In the past four years, Saint Peter's has been my home and I am grateful to this community for that," Gautam said.

While the graduates celebrated their accomplishments they were offered advice by commencement speaker Cornell William Brooks, president and chief executive officer of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Brooks praised the students for their community service and social justice efforts and encouraged them to continue to follow the examples of those before them in order to continue their hard work and transform the world. "You, as members of this class, have the opportunity to study, to conquer the great questions of our time," he said. "You have the opportunity to shape the hopes, the dreams, the aspirations of your mothers and fathers, your family members and your heritage, and make this real," he said.

Brooks received an honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters. The university also bestowed an honorary degree upon Daniel A. Altilio, president and CPO of United Way of Hudson County.

A longtime lawyer and human rights activist, Brooks previously served as president and CEO of the New Jersey Institute for Social Justice, based in Newark. He also campaigned as an advocate for public education, affordable healthcare and fiscal responsibility. He graduated from Jackson State University with a degree in political science and a Master of Divinity from Boston University School of Theology. Brooks went on to earn a Juris Doctorate from Yale Law School.

Altilio has worked to improve the lives of the most vulnerable residents in Jersey City and the surrounding communities for nearly 19 years with the United Way of Hudson County, a community-based non-profit organization that serves the basic needs of economically insufficient individuals.

the graduates. "Your significant contributions give evidence that our mission is alive in each one of you. We believe in you and we trust that you will go forth and make a difference in the world ... make life better for others."

Secretary Hendricks spoke of three "hopes" she has for the graduates as they continue on their journey. The first is to take a leap of faith and trust others as well as themselves. "To overcome adversity and confront new challenges is to be motivated by passion and compassion," she counseled. The second is to be open to change. "Make a commitment to excellence, without comparisons or contrast; set your own personal standard of excellence." The third piece of advice is "Self-respect and acceptance will free you to respect and accept others; it will open your heart and mind to be joyous in life," she said.

Felician College celebrates largest graduating class in its history

Felician College celebrated its 51st commencement May 16 in the Breslin Theater of the Lodi campus. The Class of 2015 was the largest graduating class in the history of the college, with diplomas granted to 585 students.

The six Felician College doctoral candidates prepared to receive their degrees, the first doctoral degrees conferred in the college's history.

David Kastan, Ph.D., advised graduates to "be better. That's what education is designed to allow you to be, and what it should inspire you to be." He urged the graduates to "care about what you are doing, care about the people you are with, care about the world we all live in. That makes you better; that makes us all better."

Kastan is the George M. Bodman Professor of English Literature at Yale University, having taught previously at Columbia and Dartmouth, as well as having been a distinguished visiting professor at the University of Copenhagen, at University College London, at Eotvos Lorand University in Budapest and at the American University in Cairo.

In her remarks, Dr. Anne M. Prisco, president of Felician College, charged the graduates to lead lives "filled with a hunger and curiosity to always want to learn more, ask why?" Prisco urged them to "reflect the values so dear to the mission of our college ... and act with competence, character and compassion."

Among the graduates were six who received their Doctor of Nurse Practice degrees, the first doctoral degrees conferred by Felician.

On May 30, Oratory Preparatory School, Summit, held its commencement, when 62 young men received their diplomas. Don Bosco Prep marks centennial commencement

The graduating Class of 2015 was reminded to value relationships and be of service to the community as Don Bosco Preparatory High School held its 100th commencement May 30. Auxiliary Bishop John O'Hara, director of strategic pastoral planning for the Archdiocese of New York and a 1963 graduate of the school, addressed the graduates during the ceremony at Granatelli Stadium on the school's Ramsey campus.

"As you move on in life, you will come to realize the true value of your time here at Don Bosco Prep," Bishop O'Hara said. "It is a place of belonging, where you have been part of a family that has invested not only in giving you a great education, but in guiding you on the path to a deeper awareness of who you are and the men you want to become. This experience brings out the best in you, and it will stay with you for the rest of your lives."

Bishop O'Hara's message was echoed by Don Bosco's principal, John Stanczak, who spoke of the special bond of brotherhood that unites students during their tenure on campus. "As Ironmen, you are forged from a different mold," Stanczak said. "Your success will not necessarily be measured by whether or not you achieve your dreams. Living your lives well is about accomplishing the day-to-day tasks, and taking joy in being there for your loved ones and your community."

Don Bosco Prep is celebrating its centennial in 2015 as well as the bicentennial of the birth of Saint John "Don" Bosco, who established the Society of Saint Francis de Sales (Salesians). The school is in the midst of a $10 million centennial campaign fundraising initiative to finance a multi-phase renovation and expansion of its facilities, and to build its scholarship endowment.

The school's year-long centennial celebration will continue in September with a Mass for the opening of the 101st academic year led by Cardinal Timothy Dolan, and a centennial weekend for alumni September 25 – 27. The annual President's Gala in November will mark the official closing of the centennial with awards to individuals and groups that have supported the school over the last 100 years. Mother Seton celebrates graduates

Mother Seton Regional High School held its annual commencement May 28 on the Clark campus. Diplomas were presented by members of the administrative team including Sister Jacquelyn Balasia, S.C., Joan Barron and Maureen Connell.

The class of 2015 achieved in excess of $18 million in academic scholarships and awards. Connell delivered the invocation and Sr. Jacquelyn announced the academic scholarship awards. Fr. Kevin Murphy, a member of the social studies department at Mother Seton gave the closing benediction.

"Graduates, embrace the education that you received here at Mother Seton. Use your leadership wisely," Barron stated. "Take with you your pursuit of academic excellence and of course, your Seton spirit. You made history here as students, friends, team mates and club members. Continue to serve others. By serving others, you are ultimately serving God."

The Administrator's Award for academic excellence during the past four years was awarded to Valedictorian Imrin Goraya and Salutatorian Emily Wieszczeck. The Saint Elizabeth Ann Seton Award for exemplary witness to Christian values during the past four years was presented to Sarah Dedinsky. "What I will truly take away from my years at Mother Seton, aside from my extracurricular and service activities, is the excellent education and various opportunities to excel that I have received throughout the course of my high school career," Goraya said to fellow graduates. "You are all hard-working individuals who are capable of achieving success, and I would like to remind you to never let anything get in the way of achieving your goals."

Goraya will attend Widener University as a biology pre-med major, beginning her first year in an eight-year medical program affiliated with Temple University School of Medicine.

Salutatorian Wieszczeck echoed Goraya's sentiments. "I would be remiss if I did not give credit and express my gratitude to the wonderful administration, teachers and staff who, for four years have contributed to each of our journeys by continually going beyond requirements and expectations," she said. "Saint Catherine of Siena got it right when she said, 'be who you are meant to be and you will set the world on fire.' We are each stewards of our own small flames, and throughout our lives we will meet countless others who will feed the flames of our knowledge and wisdom."

Wieszczeck intends to study nursing at Franciscan University of Steubenville, OH.

Roselle Catholic faculty contribute $65,000 for student aid

ROSELLE—In an act of generosity, the faculty and staff of Roselle Catholic High School voluntarily and anonymously elected to give back a portion of their salary to the school. The donations help provide tuition assistance for dozens of students to attend the school.

The Roselle Catholic administration and board does its best to control expenses, but every year sees a tuition increase. The cost to attend Roselle Catholic is to increase by $400 next year, breaking $11,000.

A growing number of students are in need of financial aid. Almost 60 percent of the student body receives tuition assistance—starting at $350 to considerably more—made possible by the donations of benefactors. Among the most generous is the school's faculty and staff.

This year, at the suggestion of a few teachers, Roselle Catholic launched the Faculty/Staff Initiative, to generate funds for tuition assistance.

A substantial majority of teachers and staff agreed to regular payroll deductions to support students in need. Beginning in September and running through the end of school year, the initiative will yield over $65,000 in aid. For more information about donations, visit rosellecatholic.org.
